Introduction
The vestibular, auditory, and visual systems are keys for organizing sensory input. Together these key systems provide us with our sense of self in time and space. A solid understanding of our body in space provides the core foundation for both skill and emotional regulation.

This course will examine the neurodevelopmental aspects of the vestibular/proprioceptive systems and their resultant links with the visual and auditory systems. Participants will learn the critical components of each system, their unique and complimentary contributions to sensory processing development of postural occular skills, bilateral integration, and praxis. A wide range of practical intervention strategies will be revealed through hands-on movement labs and discussion of video samples.

2-day Workshop on “Building Blocks for Sensory Integration: The Sensory-Motor Foundations for Attention & Learning”
(course code: CA-14B-09)

Introduction
This two-day experiential workshop provides therapist with an in-depth understanding of the developmental and neurophysiological links between sensory integration and the basic primary movement patterns that provide the foundation (or building blocks) for sensory modulation and integration.

Beginning with support of the primitive reflexes, we will explore the development of posture and its relationship to gross and fine motor skills along with visual and auditory function. who are often difficult to test using standard measures. Hands-on demonstrations, movement labs, and video examples will highlight treatment strategies that can be implemented with and without therapy equipment, making them appropriate for all clinical settings. A range of intervention strategies designed to support functional performance will be presented, and workshop participants will leave with a systemic way to assess, document and treat the movement challenges that arise from the lack of effective sensory motor integration.
Instructor:
Ms Sheila M. Frick (ORT) is an internationally esteemed clinician, lecturer, and pioneer in Occupational Therapy. She has over 20 years clinical experience, having worked in psychiatry, rehabilitation and home health before specializing in paediatrics. She is well known in the field of Sensory Integration, lecturing on such topics as clinical neurology, respiration, the auditory/vestibular system and auditory interventions. Sheila’s expertise is reflected in her publications as well as her proficiency in training professionals throughout the United States and abroad.
